STYLES OF THE DAY

Some Modifications of the Coiffure a La Girafe.

WITH NEW SUGGESTIONS

How It Can the Adapted to All Types. Other Evening Styles-The Latest Arrangements for the Pay.

The 1800 in dress is still with use but fin correspondent in trusses, the soif-fure a la Girafe, has not grown much in favor. Of course this is largely due to the fact that the parted bair suits as small a fraction of womanhood. That is to say, the straight, smooth combing of the hair over each brow, from a neat part in the middle. Cortainly the beautiful broad brow, the perfectly-shaped head, is requisite for such severity as this, flut the 1800 is not so, and can be made to suit various types of face by judicious medification. For, after all, it is the wave upon which everything depends.

Next you a demure effect? Then take your looks and wave them into big, soft ripples that are carried to the back of the head after they have waved.

list enough of tresses. Let us to our gowns. Overskirt is the cry of the times—double skirt or redingote style, cut open in front over another skirt. And the fall openings also show the gowns made after the fashion. But, strange to relate, it is only in fushion better and in openings that are strange to relate, it is only in fashion papers and in openings that we see much of this departure. Few gowns are yet made after the new cut. There is a slight he't in the bure of dress de-signing, while womanhood makes up its mind. Is the overskirt worthy of adoption? Does it promise anything attractive? For the time is past when a single woman or a single great a single woman or a single great modiste could send forth a mandate and watch it become a law. If the innewation suits, well and good; if not there must be none of it.

Now many, may most, of the fall gowns are not made overskirt fashion. What the winter may bring finth is not easy to predict. Still overskir's are slowly gaining more ground, and it is

Black and brown combinations are particularly handsome. This favorable

A pretty model, which goes somewhat ahead of even the boldest of the overskirt styles, is out princess fashion and opens over a skirt of black velvet.

MARYLAND OYSTERS.

An Important Industry of Chesapeake

Bay.

The oyster industry is a very important one in Maryland in the neighborhood of the waters of the Chesapeake bay. Indeed, it has been said that this industry was more fruitful and important than any other, because by it more people were directly and indirectly supported.

It is possible that, leaving out agrieniture, this may be so, as in the industry more than thirty thousand men, women and children are employed. Of these persons about twelve thousand men are engaged in catching, while the remaining eighteen thousand are kept at work at shalling, grouping, packing and so on. The boats that are used in the oyster industry must be licensed by the state of Maryland, and the licenses yield to the state ser-

enty thousand dollars a year.

This sum, says Harper's Weekly, is used to support an syster police navy, which tries to maintain the laws and preserve the peace. The navy is com-posed of two steam ressels and about twenty schooners and sloops. It is of-feared by a many commander and about and the waters of the bay and its terbusaries are happy maked with the ingredients again which the syster feeds and fatters.

Though the Champsake bay is the natural home of the syster, the beds have been so seriously depleted within the last few years that fears were entertained that the tadustry might be very considerably curtailed. Ascordingly, very stringent have were possed by the legislature of Maryland to protect the best and requires the taking tect the beds and regulate the taking of the system. One of the new regulations is to the effect that system of a less size tisan two and a half inches a ten size than two and a half inches must be returned to the rock or bed from which they have been taken. This was a wise regulation, and the good offer is of the practice under it are already acticeable, among those recent igner was one permitting a lease of he recold disease for cyster uniture. Although these are more than forter of he were to disma for oyster culture. Although there are more than forty-fice hundred of such leases recorded, each lease being of five acres, there is no systes farming to any extent corried on. The residents of those connties becorring on the waters and interested in the industry have been so determined in their opposition to the culture of questers that so far the enterprise has not amounted to much.

There are two ways of taking or-sters, dridging and tonging, and in the season of '92-3 there were over aine hund, ed vessels engaged to dre-ing, and a great many more than this in tonging. The care of dredging ressels vary with the engacity of the the state and range from a captain and live men to a captain and tredve men. These men, by the way, though they must work hard and are exposed to great hardship and frequently to danger, are not well paid. Therefore a good class of labor is not attracted. A Maryland state officer who recently in-Maryland state officer who recently investigated the dystermen of the Chesapeake said that the dredging crews were made up from "the lowest stratum of nearly all nations on earth." The tongers are of a better class, and are usually natives of the Chesapeake counties. The life of the dyster-catcher is herd, and thankless, as he can is hard and thankless, as he can scarcely ever hope to earn more than enough to sastain himself meagerly. They are out in the severest winter weather, and not infrequently they are very unsuitably clad for such work Many of the men so employed go out in the coldest weather, with no heavier body covering than balf-worn flannel shirts. Last winter vessels were frozen up out in the bay, while the crews were without either food or water. The officer before alluded to has expressed the opinion that if the tenderhearted among the oyster consumers knew with how much pain and suffering these bivalves were brought from their salt-water homes to the dining-table, they would not eat them in the happy frame of mind necessary to a fell appreciation of this finest of all

Coining Silver Dollars.

It may have surprised some folks to learn that it would require five years for the mints of the United States government to coin 167,000,000 silver dollars, but the time is not so surprising when one has done a little figuring. The mints have scarcely 300 full working days in the year, or less than 700,-000 working minutes in five years. To coin 167,000,000 in that time, therefore, it would be necessary to turn out more than 250 dollar pieces per minuto.
